CALIFORNIA'S CAPITAL CAMPUS:
BUILDING A MULTICULTURAL UNIVERSITY

California State University, Sacramento: California's Capital University

California State University, Sacramento, located just five miles from California's Capitol, is a major university in the state and the nation.

Now in its fifth decade, the University is working in the classroom and the community to prepare for the changes the 21st century will bring.

To address the education needs California's growing multicultural population will present in the years ahead, the University has developed a wide range of educational equity programs over the years, including the Educational Opportunity Program, the Student Affirmative Action Program, College Assistance Migrant Program, Science Educational Equity, the Minorities Teaching Program, the Minority Engineering Program, the Minority Enrichment Business Program and the Faculty Mentor Program, to name only a few. CSUS also has a commitment to diversifying its faculty and staff as well as its curriculum.

These programs, and the University's widely acknowledged reputation for academic excellence, attract students not only from Northern California, but from all across the United States and around the world. In fact, some 2,000 international students from more than 100 nations attend CSUS.

An Ideal Location for a Vital Campus

Sacramento, which has a population of more than 1.3 million residents, is the heart of government in California. CSUS students can take full advantage of the research, internships and employment opportunities available here.

But government is by no means the only attraction of Sacramento, which Newsweek recently ranked as one of the nation's 10 most dynamic cities. Two major rivers run through the city, and recreational and cultural activities are many and varied. The 23-mile American River Parkway lies right next to the campus, with a bike trail extending its entire length.

Sacramento was where the West began, and the fascinating history of the city and region is reflected in numerous places of interest, including the Sacramento History Center, the Crocker Art Gallery, the California State Railroad Museum and Old Sacramento. The San Francisco Bay area and the slopes of the Sierra are less than two hours away.

Set among these attractions, the University provides an excellent learning environment where students benefit from the emphasis on teaching, and where — at the same time — the faculty are recognized for their research and public service.

A Beautiful Campus Setting

With its tree-lined campus on the historic American River and its close ties to the Capitol, the University provides an environment that is both beautiful and challenging. Facilities include a one-million volume library, numerous labs equipped with the latest computers, six campus residence halls, a 7,000-seat stadium, two gymnasiums, excellent playing fields for baseball and softball, an aquatic center, an arboretum and two theatres.

CSUS, with more than 26,000 students, ranks as the sixth largest among 20 campuses of the California State University system. As CSUS grows, a $214 million master construction plan is unfolding, with a state-of-the-art engineering and computer science building, library addition, classroom building, bookstore and new residence hall among the latest projects. In the planning stages are a parking garage and another classroom building.

Major Campus Construction to Meet Student Needs

New construction is dramatically altering the campus appearance. By the year 2010, the central campus will be largely transformed, complete with a green vista extending all the way from the J Street entrance to the University Library. Ultimately, 21 new buildings, new routes for cars, bicycles and pedestrians, and performing arts and recreational facilities are to be added.

Student Life--Something for Everyone

CSUS students have a variety of services and activities available to them. Clubs for almost every academic interest, from math to Japanese languages and culture, abound. There are also many career-oriented groups, among them the International Business Organization and the Society of Professional Journalists, and groups which help students celebrate their ethnic and cultural heritage, such as MECHA, Native American Indian Alliance, African Student Alliance, and Asian Student Union. For students interested in social clubs, there is an active Greek system and a large variety of special interest societies.

A childcare center, outdoor recreation shop, community garden, the Aquatic Center, as well as numerous eating establishments and free entertainment are among other services available to students.

CSU also offers one of the most comprehensive and competitive athletics programs in Northern California. Some 17 different men's and women's sports teams compete. The nationally ranked softball and baseball teams compete in Division I; by 1991, all sports except football will be competing in that Division.

One of the highlights of each fall sports season is the annual "Causeway Classic" which pits the CSUS Hornets against neighbors and rivals the UC Davis Aggies.

Athletics—Hornets Are on the Move

Hornet athletics continue to grow at a tremendous pace. Most importantly, CSUS athletes are students first, and compete in the classroom as well as on the field.

Building a Multicultural University

CSUS students have roots in nearly every portion of the global community. The University setting provides students from all backgrounds with a rare opportunity to interact intellectually, culturally and socially in a learning environment.

CSUS has a strong commitment to helping underrepresented ethnic students achieve their goals of academic and career success. A variety of programs and services are offered with these goals in mind. A new Multicultural Center, located in the University Library, was established in 1989 to serve as a catalyst in the University's efforts to develop attitudes of tolerance, acceptance, respect and appreciation of diverse cultures and races among faculty, staff and students. Understanding and appreciating others will help to decrease discrimination based on race, religion, sexual preferences or disability. The Center also provides an environment that makes underrepresented students feel welcome and supported while receiving their education. Beginning Fall, 1990, a general education course which satisfies the new "Race and Ethnicity Issues in American Society" requirement will be taken by all students.

CSUS, which draws students from all age groups, has a special commitment to all transfer students. In fact, CSUS enrolls the largest number of new transfers of any California public college or university.

There's a Lot Going On at CSUS

Academic Excellence

By any measure, the Capital University — recently ranked among the top 15 regional universities in the western U.S. — is a beautiful and stimulating place to learn.

While CSUS is a major resource for the community, the teaching of undergraduates is the University's priority. The faculty/student ratio is one to 19.8 which means that most classes have fewer than 50 students. Unlike many other universities, full professors teach lower division courses at CSUS.

Bachelor's degrees are offered in more than 50 different academic areas; master's degrees are offered in some 35 program areas. Programs are offered in the liberal arts and sciences and teacher training, and in professional fields such as business, engineering, computer science and the health and human services, including nursing. Pre-professional coursework recommended for enrollment in law, medical, dental or other professional schools round out the curriculum.

CSUS scholarship and research also contribute to the lives of regional residents. Thousands of people in north-central California are aided by the work of such CSUS agencies as the Real Estate and Land Use Institute, the Cross-Cultural Resources Center, the Center for California Studies, and the Assistive Device Center.
